

THURSDAY MARCH 21, 2013
1:15-4:45	PROGRESS ENERGY SEMINAR – Room 1A  Held in Conjunction with the Triangle Institute for Security Studies (TISS) and North Carolina State University Energy and Security Initiative Water, Energy, and Security: Colliding Imperatives Moderator: William A. Boettcher, Department of Political Science, NC State University
1:15-1:25	Welcome Chris Gould, Associate Dean for Administration, College of Physical and Mathematical Sciences, NC State University
1:25-2:05	Keynote Address: Thirsty Energy, Scarce Water: Interdependent Security Challenges Steven Solomon, Author of “Water: The Epic Struggle for Wealth, Power, and Civilization”
2:05-2:25	Break – Rooms 1C &amp; 1D
2:25-3:30	Panel Presentations The Water Imperative Thomas Lippman, Middle East Institute The Energy Imperative Keith Schneider, Circle of Blue The Security Imperative Paul Faeth, Center for Naval Analyses The Water-Energy-Security Nexus in North Carolina David Schlobohm, North Carolina State University
3:30-4:30	Moderated Panel Discussion William A. Boettcher, Panelists, and Audience
4:30-4:40	Summary and Closing Remarks Richard Mahoney, School of Public and International Affairs, NC State University
4:45	Sign up for PDH Credits and Turn in Evaluations Conference Adjourns