

The Triangle Institute for Security Studies

*Honor Student
Dinner Presentations*

*Symposium Café
Durham, North Carolina
April 16th, 2008
6:00 - 9:15 pm*

Program

- 6:05 PM Welcome: Alex Roland (TISS)
- 6:10 PM Kaitlyn Large
(UNC-Chapel Hill, International Studies)
Why Counterinsurgencies Fail
- 6: 35 PM Main Course
- 6:45 PM Andrew McLaren
(UNC-Peace, War, and Defense)
Confederate Camp: Point Look Out
- 7:20 PM Corban Teague
(UNC-Peace, War, and Defense)
MS-13 Gangs
- 7:45 PM Zachary Whitley
(UNC-Peace, War, and Defense)
Clinton Paradigm – Terrorism and Law
- 8:20 PM Claire Lauterbach
(Duke-Political Science and History)
Prosecutions of International Crimes
- 8:50 PM James Tristan Routh
(UNC-History and Peace, War, and Defense)
World War II – Impact on NC Textiles
- 9:15 PM Farewell

Speakers

Kaitlyn Large will graduate from the UNC-Chapel Hill with a double major in Political Science and International Studies and a minor in Women's Studies. Her honor's thesis is titled "Why Counterinsurgencies Fail: The Patterns of Behavior that Block Government Learning." Ms. Large looks forward to becoming a Peace Corps Volunteer in the fall.

Claire Lauterbach will graduate from Duke with a double major in Political Science and History. Her thesis examines commitment to the ICC among African states. She is headed to The Hague to work for the Coalition for the International Criminal Court and will begin a Research MPhil in African Studies at the University of Leiden in the fall. When not pondering a career in academia and community-based research, she tries to learn Dutch (ineffectively) and to rekindle her relationship with her bike.

Andrew McLaren is a senior at UNC-Chapel Hill, majoring in Peace, War, and Defense with a concentration in National and International Defense and Security. He received "highest honors" for his thesis "Battle for History: Rewriting the Story of the Point Lookout Prison Camp for Confederates." He plans to attend graduate school in the future.

James Tristan Routh is a senior from Grays Chapel, North Carolina, graduating in May, 2008 from UNC-Chapel Hill with a double major in Peace, War, and Defense and American History. He received highest honors for his thesis entitled, "Textiles and Good Times: Randolph County, North Carolina, During the Second World War," which explores the economic and social effects of the Second World War on his home county. Mr. Routh will be attending law school at UNC-Chapel Hill in the Fall.

Corban David Teague is a senior UNC-Chapel Hill double majoring in Peace, War, and Defense and Political Science. He is originally from New Bern, North Carolina. He was inducted into Phi Beta Kappa in March 2008. His honors thesis is titled "Gunning for America: The Threat of Mara Salvatrucha (MS-13)."

Zachary Whitley is a major in Peace, War, and Defense at UNC-Chapel Hill. His honors thesis is titled "The Clinton Paradigm Shift: Justifying the Use of Force as a Counterterrorism Measure." He has been an active volunteer with Habitat for Humanity both in Chapel Hill and Chennai, India. Upon graduating, he plans to pursue a career in government work and international law.